

[iii]

nation, have (some in person, and others by letter) testified their regret at parting with an author, from whom they are pleased to say, they have received benefit united with entertainment, and with whom they are unwilling to drop their acquaintance. These gentlemen, therefore, and others who have thought well of those hints on certain articles of natural knowledge, introduced in the Lectures, will be pleased to be informed, that the author is preparing for the Public a SERIES OF DISCOURSES, illustrative of NATURE in her various Systems: to add, that the moral instruction arising from them is not omitted, will give them additional value to our numerous readers, whose encouragement, we flatter ourselves, will not be unworthily bestowed on such a work.

The work is in such forwardness, that some of the Plates are already engraved; but no determinate time can yet be fixed for its appearance.

A 2

We