CHAPTER I

THE NECROPOLIS OF THEBES . . . . .	1
ITS CHARACTER AND EXTENT. The Theban necropolis; the western mountains; extent of the necropolis; burial-places in the foothills; and in the cliffs; mortuary temples . . . . .	3
THE ART OF THE NECROPOLIS. Influence of local conditions on architecture and art; the Theban school and its methods; the inconspicuous artist . . . . .	5
ITS CREATIVE IDEAS. Faith in the future and the psychology behind it; the future state; attitude toward eschatological problems; a purely biographical impulse lacking in the tombs; clarity of thought not to be expected; an era ends with the Eighteenth Dynasty . . . . .	8
THE FORM OF THE TOMB. The form of the tomb depends little on practical considerations; the royal tombs betray the double motive; the city house; the country bungalow; the latter type imitated in the rock-tomb; early expressions of
