

APPENDIX.

No. I.

SUPPOSED LIBRARY.

THIS chamber, which is entered from the portico of the inner court or peristyle of the house of the Tragic Poet, and lies on the left of it, is nearly of the same dimensions as those opening into the atrium and the tablinum.

If books had been as numerous in the first century after Christ as they have become since the invention of printing,

B B 2