

MtoM – ZUMA
SUDAN

The tumuli still visible on the surface today count 29 objects of different size and state of preservation as far as the superstructure is concerned. They are situated in groups, standing on higher ground, between watercourses that run west to east, toward the river flood plain [Fig. 1]. Earlier reports had classified the tombs in the cemetery as being of a single type. Upon closer observation, however, it was possible
